

Fuel Surcharge Calculation

ECG adds a fuel surcharge established on the date of sign-off to offset the rising fuel costs.

The fuel surcharge is determined based upon the average cost of diesel fuel on the East Coast as published by the U. S. Energy Information Administration. This fuel rate report can be found at <https://www.eia.gov/petroleum/gasdiesel>.

ECG uses the diesel fuel rate which is published the first day of the month to establish the surcharge baseline to be used until the first day of the next month with the minimum starting base line for the diesel fuel surcharge set at $3.00 a gallon. If, on the first day of the month, diesel fuel is $3.00 a gallon or less, NO fuel surcharge will be administered. However, if the diesel fuel rate established on the first day of the month is above $3.00 per gallon, ECG will add .1% (1/10th of a percent) for every 10 cents over $3.00. That surcharge rate will then be used until the first day of the next month and will be the surcharge established on the date on which you sign-off on your job.

For example: If the average cost of diesel fuel for the East Coast on June 1st is $3.35, you would add .4% (4/10th of a percent) for your fuel surcharge for the entire month of June and until the first day of the month of July, at which time a new rate will be established and published. Using this specific rate as the example, if your job was $10,000 net, the fuel surcharge would be $40 net.

See the chart to the right for surcharges.
